“Treat others the way you would like to be treated.”

The Golden Rule

City of Mission Viejo

Respect is a positive feeling of admiration or high regard for another person or entity. Respect has several different facets, including respect for other people, self-respect, respect for authority, respect for the property of others, respect for the environment, and respect for our flag and our country. In addition to feelings, respect is backed up by actions that show you care about others.

In respecting others, the “Golden Rule” is a good guideline: treat others the way you would like to be treated. Courtesy is a form of respect and includes being polite, kind, and helpful to others and being a good listener. Empathy, the ability to understand and share the feelings of another, is also a helpful component in treating others with respect. We should teach our children to accept and respect those who may have a different color of skin, a physical handicap, learning disabilities, or look or speak differently than we do.

Self-respect is taking care of yourself—by eating right, exercising, trying to stay healthy, and working hard in school or on the job. We show respect for ourselves by staying away from drugs and activities that can cause harm to us. Say “no” to negative pressures, set goals for yourself, and be true to yourself and your high values.

We show respect to those in authority by obeying our parents, teachers, and the law. Respect for authority includes following the rules, honoring our parents, and treating our teachers and law enforcement officers with dignity.

Respect for the environment involves recycling, participating in clean-up projects in your community, and conserving water, electricity and gas.

Respect for our flag and country is shown by obeying the laws, voting, following proper flag etiquette, and appreciating our wonderful, unique

American way of life. We honor our flag and our nation by standing and placing our hand over our heart or saluting when the National Anthem is played and by reciting the Pledge of Allegiance in school and at events.

In discussing respect, it is important to highlight the alarming and growing problem of bullying. According to The Bully Project website, “More than 13 million American kids will be bullied this year, making it the most common form of violence against our young people in the nation.” Parents, students, school staff and other adults can help to prevent bullying and seek help when it occurs. This excerpt from The Bully Project provides more information.

“What is Bullying?”

(Excerpt condensed from The Bully Project)

Bullying involves an individual or a group repeatedly harming another person—physically, verbally, or socially. According to the U.S. Department of Justice, bullying behavior might include assault, tripping, intimidation, rumor spreading and isolation, demands for money, destruction of property, theft of valued possessions, destruction of another’s work, and name-calling. The Internet enables bullies to maintain a more persistent presence in the lives of their victims through cyber-bullying. Often, the victims of bullying are socially vulnerable because they have some characteristic that makes them different from the majority. Young people who have physical or learning disabilities are targeted more frequently. Other times, there are no apparent characteristics that cause the target of bullying to be singled out by the tormentor. Recent research suggests that bullying is a common occurrence in our schools. A 2011 nationwide study found that 40% of teachers and school staff consider bullying a problem in their schools and that 32% of students between ages 12-18 report experiencing bullying.

What is Respect?

- Showing admiration and a high regard for other people or entities.
- Treating others the way you would like to be treated.
- Being courteous and considerate.
- Being mindful of the feelings of others and how your words or actions affect them.
- Obeying those in authority.
- Taking care of yourself.
- Taking care of the environment.
- Showing patriotism and love of our country.

Practicing Respect

- Treat others the way you would like to be treated.
- Be polite and a good listener.
- Agree to disagree on a subject and still show respect.
- Greet others by title or name and always take the time to acknowledge others.
- Respect yourself; make good choices, eat right, exercise, get plenty of rest.
- Obey the law and school rules.
- Respect the environment by recycling, conserving water, and participating in clean-up days.

Applying Respect

- Parents speak respectfully about others and model behavior to teach children respect.
- Earn the respect of others by being a hard worker, a person of integrity, and the best you can be.
- Parents and teachers look for signs of bullying in your children. Report it and seek advice.
- Students stand up against bullying. Report it. Be a friend to victims of bullying. You just may save a life!
- Have empathy for others; imagine walking in the shoes of another. Think about feelings of others.
- Show respect for the environment by recycling and conserving water.

Personal commitments to Respect:

- I will treat others the way I want to be treated.
- I will stand up against bullying.
- I will use good manners.
- I will be a good listener.
- I will follow the rules.
- I will be considerate of others' feelings and how I affect them.
- I will think before I speak.
- I will start a "chain reaction" of kindness.
